Experience Human Coaching

A Person Centered Model for Coaching Up Your Team

Supporting people's thinking, developing strong relationships, building trust, and being curious are all part of having meaningful conversations which are at the heart of Person-Centered Coaching.

When we come from a place of curiosity rather than judgement, we are able to honor each person as an individual and value their ideas and perspectives. Using this model of coaching allows us to build strong relationship with our team members, support their critical thinking, help them to come to their own insights and solve their own problems.

Curiosity vs. Judgement

When we come from a place of curiosity rather than judgement, we are able to honor each person as an individual and value their ideas and perspectives. Using this model of coaching allows us to build strong relationship with our team members, support their critical thinking, help them to come to their own insights and solve their own problems.

Performance & Retention

Many organizations want to develop their people to a higher level of performance, support them in achieving results, and retain them for the long term. During this session we will share the research based coaching skills to equip you to positively impact performance and retention.
